GLOBAL@CLS

An Inventory of Internationally Oriented Opportunities for Columbia Law School Students

Columbia Law School
Office of International Programs
September, 2022 Update
Global@CLS provides an informal listing of the internationally-oriented, non-academic opportunities on offer to Columbia Law School students and recent graduates. For information on the Law School’s exceptionally rich array of international and comparative law classes, seminars and clinics, please consult the online curriculum guide.
Externships at the UN, NGOs and other organizations

The United Nations Externship provides students with a credit-bearing opportunity to learn more about the law and practice of the UN, and the processes of making and implementing international law at the world organization. The program consists of two parts: Fieldwork (typically two-three days per week) dealing with legal matters at a UN, UN-related office or NGO, and a weekly seminar at the Law School. Students may also, in conjunction with faculty, structure individual externships at major NGOs and other organizations.

Contact: Kerry McLean, Assistant Director of Human Rights and Public International Law, kmclean@law.columbia.edu; Liliana Vaamonde, Director of Externships and Field-Based Learning, lv2493@columbia.edu.

Winston & Strawn International Moot Court Program

The Law School sponsors three international moot court programs: the European Law Moot Court, the Philip C. Jessup International Law Moot Court, and the Vis International Commercial Arbitration Moot Court. These programs are available to 1L students as part of the first-year writing and moot court programs, and complement coursework in international, human rights, international arbitration, international trade and WTO law. Students in recent years have also participated in other moots, including the Jean-Pictet Competition in international humanitarian law and the Price Media Law Moot Court Programme.

Contact: Sophia Bernhardt, Director of Legal Writing and Moot Court Programs, sfb2147@columbia.edu

Salzburg Cutler Fellows Program

Columbia is one of a handful of schools invited to send students to participate in the Salzburg-Lloyd N. Cutler Fellows Program. During two days in Washington, DC, students engage with leading academics, judges, and practitioners in the fields of private and public international law. They examine critical issues shaping today’s international law agenda, and gain insight into international practice and public service.

Contact: Prof. Katharina Pistor, kpisto@law.columbia.edu

Spring Break Pro Bono Caravans

The Sidley Austin LLP Spring Break Pro Bono Caravans are an immensely popular part of the pro bono program at Columbia. Over spring break, groups of students travel to work at legal services and public interest organizations that, depending on the year, may be located in the U.S or abroad. They work intensively with one another, new colleagues, and new communities to provide much-needed legal assistance and may use the hours towards fulfilling the CLS and/or NYS Pro Bono Requirements. Information about available caravans and how to apply are circulated by the Pro Bono Office later in the fall semester.

Contact: Marka Belinfanti, Assistant Director, Pro Bono and Summer Programs, or Eleanor van Hest, Programming and Pro Bono Coordinator at probono@law.columbia.edu.
Summer Internships and Fellowships

Human Rights Internship Program. HRIP provides funding and other support to 1Ls and 2Ls seeking to spend a summer in human rights law-related work throughout the world. Past opportunities included, among others, working at the International Criminal Tribunals for Rwanda and Yugoslavia; advising indigenous communities in Peru; advocating for prisoners’ rights in Nigeria and Uganda; and representing refugees in Hungary, Malaysia, Mexico, Serbia and South Africa.

Contact: Kerry McLean, Assistant Director of Human Rights and Public International Law, kmclean@law.columbia.edu; Iliana Ortega, Coordinator for Summer Programs, iso2102@columbia.edu.

International Private Sector Internships. The Office of Career Services’ extensive database includes listings for overseas internships with law firms, corporate legal offices, and other private sector employers. While some of these positions are unpaid, some may offer expense stipends or compensation.

Contact: Frantz T. Price, Director of International and Alumni Careers, ftp4@columbia.edu.

John Rochester Oldham ’83 Fellowship. The Oldham Fellowship provides funding for students who undertake summer public interest work and/or research in greater China. (The Hong Yen Chang Center for Chinese Legal Studies can assist in finding other summer opportunities in China as well.)

Contact: Nick Pozek, Asst. Dir. of Asian Law Programs, npozek@law.columbia.edu.

Morrison & Foerster Public Interest Fellowship in Japan. The Morrison & Foerster Public Interest Fellowship in Japan provides stipends for up to three students to spend the summer working at NGOs, ministries, or other approved non-law firm positions in Japan.

Contact: Nick Pozek, Asst. Dir. of Asian Law Programs, npozek@law.columbia.edu.

Parker School Student Innovation Grants (Year Round). The Parker School offers seed grants in amounts up to $3,000 to support innovative student initiatives. Grants can be applied toward the costs of organizing an on-campus or online event, research projects, or other initiatives related to comparative and international law.

Contact: Nick Pozek, Asst. Dir. Parker School, npozek@law.columbia.edu.

Parker School Research Grants (Year Round). The Parker School offers research grants in amounts up to $3,000 to cover travel-related expenses for students to engage in research related to comparative and international law.

Contact: Nick Pozek, Asst. Dir. Parker School, npozek@law.columbia.edu.

Academic Year Fellowships

Isaac and Jacqueline Weiss Shapiro Fellowship. Awarded to upper-class students engaged in sustained research projects on Japanese legal topics under the direction of Columbia faculty.

Contact: Nick Pozek, Asst. Dir. of Asian Law Programs, npozek@law.columbia.edu.
Postgraduate Fellowships

Leebron Human Rights Fellowship. Funding is available for graduating Columbia Law School J.D. or LL.M. students to spend a post-graduate year, either in the United States or abroad, in pursuit of a career in human rights law. Recipients may take up positions in academic life; in governmental, intergovernmental or nongovernmental organizations or agencies; or as legal practitioners specializing in human rights work. Contact: Kerry McLean, Assistant Director of Human Rights and Public International Law, kmclean@law.columbia.edu.

Columbia Law School Global Public Service Fellowship. This twelve-month fellowship, available to graduating J.D. and LL.M. students and recent alumni, supports work abroad with a public service organization, intergovernmental agency, national supreme court, or international criminal court. Contact: Kerry McLean, Assistant Director of Human Rights and Public International Law, kmclean@law.columbia.edu.

Parker Fellowships - International Court of Justice. Columbia Law School has for many years successfully placed recent J.D. or LL.M. graduates in the ICJ's prestigious "Judicial Fellowship" program. With a Law School stipend, Fellows assist the Court with research, case preparation and drafting. Contact: John Tarbet, Assoc. Dir. of International Programs, john.tarbet@law.columbia.edu.

Mark Haas Public Interest Fellowship. This fellowship supports a graduating or recently graduated J.D. or LL.M. from China to pursue public interest legal work in the United States for up to five months. Contact: Rebecca Hinde, Program Coordinator of Public Interest and Government Programs, rhinde@law.columbia.edu.

Sandler Human Rights Watch Fellowship. During a year spent at either the New York or Washington, D.C. office of Human Rights Watch, Fellows monitor international human rights developments, conduct on-site investigations, draft reports on human rights conditions, and engage in public human rights advocacy. Contact: Kerry McLean, Assistant Director of Human Rights and Public International Law, kmclean@law.columbia.edu.

CLS Postgraduate Social Justice and Government Fellowships. Limited funding is available for qualified graduates who are committed to careers in public interest law to work in non-profit organizations, intergovernmental agencies and public international institutions that are confronting great demand with diminished resources. Contact: Kerry McLean, Assistant Dir. of Human Rights and Public Int’l Law, kmclean@law.columbia.edu, for advising; Rebecca Hinde, Coordinator for Postgraduate Fellowships, rhinde@law.columbia.edu, for questions about the application and payment process.
International Study Programs and International Dual Degrees

Students can gain an enriched understanding of law, language, culture and governance in a global context by spending a 2L or 3L semester, or the entire 3L year, at a partner school abroad. Overseas programs are taught in English and other languages; some offer dual degrees, certificates, or internships. All allow immersion in a foreign academic experience and credit toward the JD degree.

Contact: Audrey Baker, Director of International Programs, ab602@columbia.edu.

Global Alliance Programs (one semester abroad)

- University of Amsterdam
  - LLM in International Criminal Law
- Oxford University
  - Law and Finance
- Paris I/Sciences Po
  - Global Business Law and Governance

Dual Degree Programs (entire 3L year abroad)

- University of Paris I
  - JD/M1 in French Law
- Sciences Po (Paris)
  - JD/Master in Econ. Law – Global Studies
- Sciences Po (Paris) (Pending)
- London School of Economics
  - JD/LLM
- SOAS (London)
  - JD/LLM
- University College London
  - JD/LLM
- Kings College London
  - JD/LLM
- Inst. for Law & Finance (Frankfurt)
  - JD/LLM

Single Semester Programs

- University of Amsterdam
- Hebrew University (Jerusalem)
- Bucerius Law School (Hamburg)
- Hitotsubashi University (Tokyo)
- University of Buenos Aires
- Humboldt University (Berlin)
- Central European University (Vienna)
- University of Luxembourg
- Direito GV (Rio or São Paulo)
- University of Neuchâtel (Switzerland)
- ESADE Law School (Barcelona)
- Peking University (Beijing)
- European University Institute (Florence)
- Sapienza University (Rome)
- Fudan University (Shanghai)
- Waseda University (Tokyo)

Independent Programs

Students may petition to study for one semester on an independent basis at a school where the Law School does not have an established single semester program. Pre-approved programs include Strathmore (Kenya), U. Capte Town (South Africa), and King’s College London (U.K.)
Law Journals

Columbia is home to over a dozen student-run journals, and many self-identify as engaging to varying degrees with international issues and/or operating in the international community. Some announce their international orientation in their titles; others do not, but may still devote substantial resources to writings that are internationally relevant and cited by tribunals and scholars around the world. A selection of these follows:

American Review of International Arbitration. While not strictly a student-run journal, ARIA actively encourages the participation of student editors. Both JD and LLM students are part of the editorial team and they actively welcome participation from both groups of students. ARIA publishes scholarly articles, commentaries, case notes, and other materials relating to international commercial arbitration and international investment arbitration. It is the only publication of its kind in the United States and one of the leading publications in the field internationally. Contact: Kabir Duggal, Lecturer-in-Law (kduggal@law.columbia.edu), and the current student editor-in-chief, Olivia Lu (Osl2102@columbia.edu).

Columbia Human Rights Law Review. HRLR is the nation's top-ranked human rights law publication. HRLR publishes academic work about civil liberties and human rights issues around the world, with the belief that critical analysis and discussion help promote the global cause of human rights. Contact: Editorial Board, jrnhum@law.columbia.edu.

Columbia Journal of Asian Law. CJAL is a student-run publication exploring both public and private law related to Asia. The Journal welcomes historical, comparative, and multi-disciplinary manuscripts, as well as papers or notes examining the impact of rapidly changing legal regimes on specific areas of practice. Contact: Editorial Board, jrnasian@law.columbia.edu.

Columbia Journal of Environmental Law. The Columbia Journal of Environmental Law is one of the oldest environmental law journals in the nation and is regarded as one of the preeminent environmental journals in the country. In addition to law libraries, law firms, individuals, and courts throughout the United States, it has a significant international readership. The Journal encourages student writing and publishes student works through its note program. Contact: Editorial Board, jrnenv@law.columbia.edu.

Columbia Journal of European Law. CJEL, a student-run publication, is one of the few legal publications in the United States devoted exclusively to European law and is one of the top-ranked journals in the world in its field. It publishes articles, authored by leading academics and practitioners, which cover a broad range of issues including business law, intellectual property, human rights, and social problems. Contact: Editorial Board, cjel@law.columbia.edu.

Columbia Journal of Gender & Law. CJGL, edited and published entirely by students, publishes interdisciplinary works rooted in feminist inquiry with the aim of promoting dialogue, debate, and awareness that will broaden the very concept of feminism as one that critically engages varied forms of social hierarchy and power differentials and their relation to the law. Contact: Editorial Board, jrmgen@law.columbia.edu.
Columbia Journal of Transnational Law. The Columbia Journal of Transnational Law is the second-oldest student-run international law journal in the nation and the second-most-cited journal at Columbia. Its purpose is to provide practitioners and scholars with insight into the current transnational legal issues. The Journal is regularly cited by academics, practitioners, and courts, including the United States Supreme Court. Contact: Editorial Board, transnational@law.columbia.edu.

Student Associations

Columbia Law School is home to more than 100 student organizations and activities, many of which reflect an interest in international or comparative law, or simply an affinity for cross-border culture and communities. A selection of these follows:

Asian Pacific American Law Students Association. APALSA facilitates academic and professional development and hosts numerous social events throughout the year. Members build strong friendships that provide support through law school and last well beyond graduation. The group works with chapters at other area law schools to build a network within their wider community. Contact: apalsa@law.columbia.edu

Columbia European Law Association. CELA is a Eurocentric student group for all those interested in European law, policy, jurisprudence, institutions, firms, and NGOs. They monitor developments of interest to the transatlantic relationship, but also Europe’s relationships with Africa and Asia. Students from all law degree programs, cultures, and nationalities are welcome to participate in their activities. Contact: cela@law.columbia.edu

Columbia International Arbitration Association. CIAA is the Law School’s only student association focusing exclusively on the topic of international arbitration. The organization taps into an abundant reservoir of enthusiasm for the subject of international arbitration among JDs, LLMs, academics, and practitioners. CIAA’s many events, including Columbia Arbitration Day (CAD), attract worldwide attention and participation by some of the most prominent names in the field. Contact: ciaa@law.columbia.edu

Columbia Society of International Law. CSIL is the Law School’s principal student group dedicated to international law. It informs members about current international law issues and practice opportunities; provides access to many of the leading international law scholars and firms; and offers career guidance related to public and private international law. Contact: csil@law.columbia.edu

Law in Africa Student Society. The Society creates a community by representing the interests of, and bringing together, students who identify with the African continent. It provides a forum for students, professors, and professionals to meet and pursue their interest in African cultures, societies, legal jurisprudence, and job opportunities. Contact: lass@law.columbia.edu
NHK (Japanese Legal Studies Association). NHK welcomes anyone with an interest in Japan, regardless of level of familiarity with the country, its culture, or language. The group organizes social, cultural, and educational events, along with information on opportunities at Columbia and in New York for people with Japanese interests. We work in close coordination with the Center for Japanese Legal Studies and the Japanese legal community. Contact: nhk@law.columbia.edu.

Society for Immigrant and Refugee Rights. SIRR is dedicated to fostering a diverse community at Columbia Law that is focused on promoting the legal rights of refugees and immigrants in the United States and globally. During the school year, SIRR sponsors guest panels, administers various pro bono projects, and leads trips domestically and abroad. SIRR also sponsors a competitive moot court team that allows interested students to delve into immigration law through a fun, yet intense, two-semester program. Contact: SIRR@law.columbia.edu.

Society for Chinese Law. SCL is the student group for members of the Columbia Law School community with an interest in Chinese legal development, U.S.-China Relations, and legal practice in China. In addition to its Lunch Lecture Series, a forum for discussing recent Chinese legal developments, SCL regularly sponsors law firm events for students interested in working in China-related fields as well as social and cultural events. Contact: scl@law.columbia.edu.

South Asian Law Students Association. SALSA promotes discussion and awareness of issues affecting South Asians, particularly with respect to the law. We also strive to create a sense of community among students of South Asian heritage as well as those interested in South Asia by organizing numerous social, cultural, educational, and professional events throughout the year. Contact: salsa@law.columbia.edu.

Student Public Interest Network. SPIN strives to build a community for students interested in pursuing public interest law, broadly defined, and provide a network for public interest collaboration at CLS. It is deliberately a cross-issue student group, welcoming students interested in all issues within public interest law. Contact: SPIN@law.columbia.edu.

Rightslink. Rightslink is a student-run human rights law outreach and research organization based at Columbia Law School. Working closely with the Human Rights Institute and other Columbia University entities, Rightslink organizes a variety of academic, social, and professional events throughout the year to foster a human rights community at the Law School and to connect students with scholars and practitioners around New York. Contact: rightslink@law.columbia.edu.

National Security Law Society. NSLS promotes discussion around vital issues such as national security, privacy, and the laws of war. It sponsors forums and panels on current events and broader long-term issues, connects students with the Law School’s preeminent national security law faculty, and hosts meetings with practitioners in the field. Contact: nsls@law.columbia.edu.
Columbia Law School faculty direct a broad range of faculty-led centers and institutes through which they share scholarship and policy analysis through lectures, conferences, and other initiatives. Many of these engage on international or comparative topics, and some – such as the Human Rights Institute – offer paid or credit-bearing research assistant positions and other opportunities for students. A selection of these follows:

Hong Yen Chang Center for Chinese Legal Studies. The Hong Yen Chang Center for Chinese Legal Studies prepares students to take on leadership roles in Chinese law, and provides them with the skills and knowledge they need to succeed in China's rapidly changing legal environment. Contact: Nick Pozek, Asst. Dir. of Asian Law Programs, npozek@law.columbia.edu.

Center for Int'l Commercial and Investment Arbitration. The Center for International Commercial and Investment Arbitration is designed to further the teaching and study of international arbitration, building on Columbia Law School's well-established expertise in this growing legal practice. Contact: Gabriel Soto, Program Coordinator, gsoto@law.columbia.edu.

Center for Israeli Legal Studies. The Center for Israeli Legal Studies sponsors lectures, seminars, and conferences, creates fellowship opportunities for LL.M. and J.S.D. students, and develops exchange opportunities for students to pursue research or internships in Israel. Contact: Adebambo Adesanya, Coordinator, aa4551@columbia.edu.

Center for Japanese Legal Studies. The Center for Japanese Legal Studies is the first and only center of its kind in the United States. It actively promotes research on Japanese law, aided by the country’s premier collection of Japanese legal materials. Contact: Nick Pozek, Asst. Dir. of Asian Law Programs, npozek@law.columbia.edu.

Center for Korean Legal Studies. The Center for Korean Legal Studies at Columbia Law School (CKLS) has been a national focal point for scholarship and exchange on Korean law and international legal issues regarding Korea for more than 25 years. Bringing together scholars, practitioners, and students from around the world, the mission of CKLS is to support research, education, and debate on a comprehensive range of topics impacting the Korean Peninsula from legal and policy perspectives. It is the only institution devoted to legal research on both South and North Korea. Academic offerings include courses addressing the domestic and international legal complexities surrounding these two unique countries. CKLS also offers Columbia Law students opportunities for research assistantships. Contact: ckls@law.columbia.edu.

Center for Law and Economic Studies. The Center for Law and Economic Studies’ basic mandate is to develop interdisciplinary research and teaching programs in order to shed new light on the “fundamental economic and legal problems of the modern industrial society.” Contact: Christopher Mark, Assistant Director, cmark@law.columbia.edu.
Center on Global Governance. The center addresses globalization's legal dimensions through diverse interdisciplinary research and scholarship. The Center supports long-term research projects, periodic conferences; policy-oriented projects with other Columbia University centers, and joint programs with international organizations such as the United Nations. Contact: Olena Jennings, Assistant to Professor Doyle, omj2101@columbia.edu.

Center on Global Legal Transformation. The Center on Global Legal Transformation's objective is to analyze how this trend affects the role of law as a mode of social ordering, its differential effects on individuals and societies around the world, and its impact on the legitimacy of law in the eyes of those whose compliance it seeks. Contact: Prof. Katharina Pistor, kpisto@law.columbia.edu.

Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment. The Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment (CCSI), a joint center of Columbia Law School and the Earth Institute at Columbia University, is the only university-based applied research center and forum dedicated to sustainable international investment. CCSI's mission is to develop and advance policies and practices that shape investment so that investment contributes to and does not undermine sustainable development. CCSI integrates legal, economic and policy expertise, and approaches sustainable investment holistically, bridging investment law, natural resource management, human rights, economics, political economy, and environmental management. Students support the Center's activities, including rigorous research, policy analysis and advisory services, educational programs, development of tools and resources, multi-stakeholder dialogue and knowledge sharing among policymakers, development advocates, scholars, business leaders, and community stakeholders. CCSI also regularly hosts leading experts and practitioners at events at Columbia (often co-organized with student groups), including an annual speaker series on developments in international investment law, conferences on the role of investment for sustainable development, and regular lectures and discussions throughout the year. Contact: Lisa Sachs, Director, lsachs1@law.columbia.edu

European Legal Studies Center. The European Legal Studies Center enjoys an outstanding reputation for training students to assume leadership roles in international and European law, public affairs, and the global economy. The Center also hosts various events and lunch talks by leaders in European Law. Contact: Prof. Anu Bradford, abradf@law.columbia.edu

The Human Rights Institute. The Human Rights Institute (HRI) advances international human rights through education, advocacy, fact-finding, research, scholarship, and critical reflection. It works in partnership with advocates, communities, and organizations pushing for social change to develop and strengthen the human rights legal framework and mechanisms, promote justice and accountability for human rights violations, and build and amplify collective power. Across the many substantive areas of its work, the Institute builds bridges between scholarship and activism, develops capacity within the legal community, engages governments, and models new strategies for progress. The Human Rights Institute is the focal point for human rights education at Columbia Law School, providing opportunities for students to collaborate as advisors in its Student Advisory Committee, as research assistants, and in co-organizing lectures and symposia. It runs a vibrant program of events each semester, hosts human rights advocates from around the world, and offers career advising and mentorship to students. The Institute’s events range from series with leading advocates on human rights careers and the intricacies of practicing human rights law to lectures that tackle current events and debates and seek to push new issues onto the agenda. Events are open to law students, faculty, and the Columbia University community, and provide a unique opportunity for students to engage directly with leaders in the human rights field. Contact: HRI Managing Director, HRI@law.columbia.edu

Ira Millstein Center for Global Markets and Corporate Ownership. The Mission of the Millstein Center is to positively shape and influence how corporations are governed. Through research and engagement with business leaders, corporate boards, investors, the legal community, and academics, the Center convenes leaders to create meaningful dialog, while balancing conflicting points of view, to strengthen corporate governance, sustainability, and performance. Contact: Marcel Bucsescu, Executive Director, marcel.bucsescu@law.columbia.edu

Sabin Center for Climate Change Law. The Sabin Center develops legal techniques to fight climate change, trains students and lawyers in their use, and provides up-to-date resources on key topics in climate law and regulation. Contact: Michael Burger, Executive Director, mburger@law.columbia.edu